Society Notes.

Misses Emma and Amelia Knofler very pleasantly entertained a few of their friends on Tuesday evening in honor of their guests Miss Bertha Aptenreith and Miss Anna Kraft of Nevada, Mo. Chas. Chapin and Miriam Owings proved themselves the most efficient in a guessing contest and were awarded the prizes. One of the most enjoyable treats of the evening was the music furnished by Misses Aptenreith and Kraft, both of whom are very talented pianists. Those present were:

Misses.	Men.
Bertha Aptenreith	Chas. Chapin
Anna Kraft	Harry Bell
Miriam Owings	Harvey Graves
Faith Stephens	Howard Rodgers
Vee Barley	Louis Duff
Agnes Elmer	John Duff
Kate Hunter	Edward Rogers
Ruth With	Winifred Brown
Katherine Barker	Joe. L. McQuinn
Caroline Vogt

Edith Goodrich of Indiana.
Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Bush.

One of the most interesting and entertaining events given in town recently was the recital given by some of the pupils of Miss Leola Faulconer at the latter's home last Thursday night. A few of the friends and relatives of the pupils were guests and showed great interest in the efforts made by the young musicians. The first number on the program was La Jolie Duchess Polka—Krogman, by Miss Lucile Overstreet. Although quite small Miss Lucile showed herself well equal to her piece and played in a most pleasing manner. Next came Monastery Bells, rendered by Miss Mamie Whiteside. Although she has very recently resumed the study of music begun several years ago, she showed she had made excellent use of her time and played her selection with much feeling which evoked hearty applause. Miss Julia Graves followed with Chaminade's Flatterer and Mendelssohn's Spring Song. Miss Julia is always a favorite with Montgomery City audiences, and she sustained her reputation, playing both numbers with brilliance and daintiness. Next was a pretty bright piano duet—Hilarity, given by Miss Faulconer and Miss Jessie Guppton, this was followed by Mazurka Melodique—Dolmestch, by Miss Jessie Guppton. Miss Jessie certainly showed she was familiar with the key board from one end to the other and all who heard her agreed she was quite an accomplished pianist, giving promise of great things in the future. There were several other members of the class who had their pieces prepared but were unavoidably detained. Miss Faulconer has a number of pupils who are just beginning and under thorough instruction will be prepared to play at her next recital.

Mrs. Frances Rodgers of Mexico, one of the guests, favored the audience with several selections which were highly appreciated. Mrs. Rodgers is quite an accomplished pianist and vocalist and although she has not studied for several years she has kept up her music remarkably well. All were delighted with her number. She seems to have transmitted some of her talent to her small daughter, Miss Katherine, who played several selections and showed remarkable ability for one of her age.

Miss Faulconer, on request, favored the guests with one of Chopin's preludes; in the rendering of this composition, Miss Faulconer showed a thorough knowledge of the piece she attempted and impressed more deeply on the minds of her hearers her wonderful ability and power. She is deeply interested in music as she studies it and imparts her knowledge to others and deserves to rank with the foremost musicians and music teachers to be found near here.

Delightful refreshments were served and the guests departed thanking teacher and pupils for a most profitable and enjoyable evening.

Road Dragging.

The latest bulletin of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture is a revised edition of "Road Dragging" according to the King method. Sometimes it is also called the Missouri Idea. Mr. King has shown that by regularly dragging an ordinary dirt road it becomes smooth, hard and impervious to water. Ruts are filled, the center is lifted, and the rain is drained off. The apparatus needed is made by fastening together, two slabs so that they will run on their edges, put on a chain or a strong wire, hitch your team to the machine and go ahead. In two months the road will have undergone a transformation, and the longer the apparatus is used the better the road will be. Would it not be worth while for some of our progressive road bosses to experiment with Mr. King's idea? Persons living along rural mail routes might try dragging the roads to make sure the government will continue the route. To get the pamphlet on "Road Dragging," send postal card to Geo. H. Ellis, Columbia, Mo.

A Sudden Death.

While Otto Bottoms, east of town, was driving to Vandalia last Friday with his wife and baby, the horse they were driving got one of its feet caught in a culvert. Mrs. Bottoms who just a moment before remarked to her husband that the culvert was a very bad one, was found to be sitting by his side dead a moment later, still clasping the infant in her arms. Noticing the child about to fall he caught it and at the same time looking at his wife discovered that life had left her.—Wellsville Record.

For almost a quarter of a century Kansas has had constitutional prohibition. It is now alleged that while lawyers have fought and liquor men have paid out millions in trying to defy the law, that law has every minute of the time been absolutely null and void, and the supposed amendment to the constitution is without any effect whatever. A clerk in the state auditors office is said to have discovered the fact recently while examining some of the legislature records and found that the votes upon the question had not been properly entered upon the journal.

"I see you mentioned a pair of boots in last week's Gazette that had worn well for seventeen years," said James Dudley to the Fulton Gazette the other day. "I can beat that, for I have a pair of red topped, pointed-toed boots that were made for my father, Payton Dudley, fifty years ago, and they are good boots yet. An old fellow living on Cow creek, east of Readville, made them for my father, and he wore them on three trips to Virginia and back, and were them on and off for at least 35 years—toward the last, wearing the boots in winter and shoes in the summer time. They were half-soled three times, but nothing was done to the uppers and they did him good service up to the time he died, fifteen years ago. They are hanging up in the store at Toledo now, and were shown at the last street fair in Fulton a few years ago."

Missouri will not have more than one fourth of an apple crop this year. In the river hills and the Ozark regions, there will be one half the usual annual product, but in some parts of the state the crop will be an entire failure. Dr. J. C. Whitten of the Horticulture department of Missouri University says that almost from the falling of the bloom the fruit showed a tendency to drop, and there is not more than a fourth of a crop of apples on the trees, while many orchards are almost destitute of fruit. "This dropping," says Dr. Whitten, "has been caused by a kind of fungus growth not uncommon but usually doing little harm. This year, however, the wet weather has augmented its growth and this has been the cause of the damage. Under any but extreme conditions the Bordeaux mixture, composed of copper-sulphate and lime in water, will check the fungus and prevent injury to the crop, but this year where orchards have been sprayed, succeeding rains have washed off the mixture and the work has been lost."
